Meet the Men of the Mentoring Minority Male Scholars Program

Successful men of color from across the Madison College community have joined with male students of color to form a unique program devoted to supporting students in achieving their academic, career and personal goals.

We are members of the Madison College community who have come together to share insights, experiences and understanding. We are male students of color who are building strong networks and learning leadership skills that will take us through graduation and into the future.

We are working together, within our community, to develop future leaders. We invite you to join us.

Build skills for success

Become a member of the Mentoring Minority Male Scholars Program and join a community of men who are developing leadership and academic skills and making connections that can last a lifetime.

How the program works
The Mentoring Minority Male Scholars Program at Madison College is designed to encourage first-time and continuing students to build deeper and broader connections across the college and to create a supportive community of learning. In this program, you will:

■ Meet and work with a successful mentor from the college community.

■ Get together with other students, faculty and staff biweekly to network, attend workshops and hear guest speakers. Time will be set aside during the meeting for you to work with your mentor on your academic, career and personal goals.

■ Join in academic, life-skills and leadership activities with others in the program.

Your commitment
To remain eligible for the program you must maintain satisfactory academic progress, which includes having regular attendance, completing six credits and maintaining a minimum grade point average (GPA) of 2.0.

Objectives
In the Mentoring Minority Male Scholars Program, you will

■ Build your resume and explore careers.

■ Develop your leadership and professional skills.

■ Network and make meaningful connections.

■ Work on visible and important community projects.

■ Meet and work with successful mentors.

The Mentoring Minority Male Scholars Program, or 3MSP, brings together male students of color with male leaders who provide the support, encouragement and guidance for personal and academic success.

If you are a new or continuing student who is a male person of color, you are invited to become a member.
